MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT

Colleges and universities today are confronting multiple challenges posed by changing student demographics, competition for better quality results in higher education, a world transformed by technology and transparent access to information, and an extremely competitive marketplace. This environment makes it extremely critical for Merrimack to further advance and communicate the good things happening at Merrimack College.

Many of you may have already seen our new tagline - Set yourself in motion - and the strengthened look to our publications and Web site which reflects the energy and vitality prevalent on the Merrimack campus today. This concept was developed after extensive research last spring with many of you who helped to sharpen our understanding of how Merrimack constituencies perceive the college. The research helps us to enhance recruitment of more selective students representing greater geographic diversity, close the gap between old perceptions of Merrimack and what we are today, and establish the image of a unique educational institution that is rigorous, demanding and challenging.

Merrimack is perceived as a quality four-year liberal arts college with strong faculty and leadership that values teaching and extols the benefits of a liberal arts education while offering both solid and innovative applied learning and professional degree programs. Our many strong core characteristics and qualities, including a superior academic curriculum, innovative interdisciplinary programs and strong co-operative education and career development programs, differentiate Merrimack from other institutions of higher education. We continue to work to engender in our students a life-long love of learning and the capacity to live a life of high aspiration.

Many of you may have also seen our new Warrior logo that was unveiled this fall after a lengthy process of discussion and debate among our community. If you haven't seen the logo, and our new mascot, "Mack the Warrior," I refer you to page 5 of this issue. Many of our students and alumni have expressed enthusiasm and have embraced it wholeheartedly. I believe it to be truly reflective of what we at Merrimack are about and know it will serve our community well for generations to come.

As always, I'd like to recognize the significant contributions that many of our alumni make to Merrimack. I thank you for your continued hard work, commitment and enthusiasm for all that Merrimack College is today and aspires to be tomorrow.

Sincerely,

Richard J. Santagati

TEACHERS:

Making a Difference in the Lives of Children

by Kathleen Franzese

Teachers today face more challenges than ever before and must possess the ability to address a variety of student needs. Threat of layoffs during economic downturns, school safety issues, MCAS testing, and the increasing special needs of today's students are just a few of these challenges. Still, for the many students who decide to pursue teaching, the profession continues to offer countless rewards and remains extremely fulfilling.

More than 225 students at Merrimack are currently enrolled in either a bachelor's or a master's degree program that will lead to licensure as a teacher. Merrimack's state-approved teacher preparation programs include Elementary Education for grades 1 - 6; Middle School for grades 5 - 8; Secondary Education for grades 8 - 12 in the fields of Biology, Chemistry, History, English, Mathematics, Modern Languages and Political Science/Political Philosophy; and the newest program - Teacher of Students with Moderate Disabilities PreK - 8.

In order to teach in Massachusetts, candidates must pass three Massachusetts Tests for Educator Licensure (MTEL) to receive either the Elementary Education or Teacher of Moderate Disabilities license. Candidates must pass two Massachusetts' Tests of Educator Licensure (MTEL) for either the classroom. They must also maintain a 3.0 grade point average in their major and in their education courses.

"All components needed to achieve licensure are embedded in our programs. We realize that passing the MTEL exams are challenging. Therefore, we offer preparatory sessions and courses that give

Loving the Path She's Chosen

by David Rattigan

As she's leading her students through grammar or vocabulary exercises, Erin Keleher '02 will sometimes state, "I loved this when I was your age." She knows it will elicit some eye-rolling on the part of her students. "They all think it's boring," she says, "Then I'll say something and they'll say,...How did you learn that word?" and I'll say,...I learned it in school."

In her second year teaching English and reading to sixth, seventh, and eighth graders at Sacred Heart School in Lawrence, Keleher knows she's chosen a path she loves. "I love to learn and I want to pass that on to young people," says Keleher, 23, a former psychology major-elementary education minor who was on Merrimack's dean's list for six semesters. She's currently putting her Merrimack experience to work in the middle-school classroom, and seeking her master's degree. One thing that helped her prepare for professional experience was "The Skillful Teacher" seminars at Merrimack, which presented scenarios on classroom situations.

"The faculty at Merrimack were more than teachers; they were like mentors and friends," she says. "They'd support you, share their experiences, give you models to try, and help you to make learning fun, not boring."

Teachers: Making a Difference

School districts within a 20-mile radius of Merrimack benefit from having students complete 300 hour practicum in their classrooms. The practicum is an invaluable field experience for Merrimack students and provides support to many area teachers. During the practicum, Merrimack students are observed by a college supervisor and evaluated according to state standards. After each classroom observation, a three-way conference between the student teacher, the classroom teacher, and the college supervisor transpires. The student teacher receives immediate feedback as to what went well, and what could be improved. These evaluations enable the student teacher to improve upon his or her skills, very often resulting in a distinctive change in performance from beginning to the end of the practicum.

Although the MTEL can assess a student's knowledge, many attributes vital to good teaching, such as compassion, intuition and interpersonal skills, are not easily measured. Merrimack's holistic approach in preparing future educators strives to incorporate knowledge of physical, emotional and cognitive growth of children into the learning process. This year, the visiting accreditation team from the state of Massachusetts complimented the Department at Merrimack. "The faculty has a spark and enthusiasm for teaching that they model and pass on to their students. Hopefully, like a ripple effect, our students will carry that torch of enthusiasm into their own classrooms and will ignite a passion for learning with the next generation," said Thornton.

Dr. Thornton always asks her students to list the qualities of a teacher they remember and liked from K - 12. She then asks them to list qualities of a teacher they remember for negative reasons. "I tell them that the choice is theirs. They can be the kind of teacher that meant the world to them or they can be like the teacher they wish they never had. The students often realize that they remember a particular teacher in a positive way - because he or she made a difference."

faculty for this holistic approach.

"We work to instill in our students the value of a holistic approach to teaching so that these future educators are empowered to create a caring environment in the classroom where each child feels accepted, nurtured and special. Very often children are the most motivated and the most productive when they have a teacher who truly cares for them," Dr. Thornton explained.

Students have also commented on how they have benefited from the caring faculty in the Education

From Playing Teacher to Being a Teacher

by David Rattigan

As a young girl, Lori Morris would play teacher for her brother and two sisters in the basement of their Lawrence home. Her real teachers would sometimes donate scrap paper and other supplies for use in her "classroom."

"I always knew that I wanted to be a teacher," says Morris, 27, who grew up to become just that. After receiving her bachelor's degree, she became a third grade teacher at the Robert Frost Elementary School in Lawrence. She earned her master's degree in elementary education from Merrimack in '02.

Being both a teacher and student was an interesting intellectual experience, said Morris, who is in her seventh year as a teacher.

"You don't fully experience teaching until you're thrown into the classroom," says Morris. Being responsible for students over the course of a school year, she had to deal with children whose parents had little involvement in their schoolwork, and a large number with special needs. She was able to take knowledge and strategies from the Merrimack classroom (including structuring individual education plans for special needs students) and apply them in the field, and vice-versa.

"There would be situations that would come up in the (elementary school) classroom, and we were able to discuss them in my Merrimack classes," she said. "It helped a lot."

Master's of Education Program Expands Career Options for Two Businessmen

by David Rattigan

Students Frank McCall '81 and Michael Quinn have a lot in common. Both are children of teachers, both are married and live in Andover (Mass.), and both had successful careers in business before they decided on a different path. They're also classmates in Merrimack's M.Ed. Elementary Education degree program.

McCall, 44, was an executive at Boston Edison and later at a successful energy software startup (Excelergy), but from the time he hit 40 he'd been thinking of a radical career change.

"This thing in the back of my head, which had never gone away, was about getting into education," McCall says. Going back to school last year also allowed him more time to spend with his three children, ages 10 through 16.

decided it was time for a change. "This offered the chance to start over," says Quinn. "To do something completely different from what I'd done in the past."

Both men were drawn to Merrimack's Master's of Education (M.Ed.) program because of its geographic convenience, but were further impressed by its quality. They like the low student-to-teacher ratios in the classrooms, and the connections created in the college community, from the office staff to faculty.

"First and foremost, it's personal," says McCall. "The professors have high standards. In both the program and course content, they're very accommodating to what you, as a student, want to get out of the class. There's always opportunity for student input in classes this size."

The program, which first accepted students in 1998, recently received re-accreditation for five years from the state of Massachusetts and full approval from the New England Association of Schools and Colleges (NEASC). The M.Ed. program at Merrimack offers students two options. Option I is the M.Ed. program of study for candidates who hold a bachelor's degree, but are new to the teaching profession, and are preparing for the Initial License. Option II is for teachers who currently hold the Initial License and are being prepared for the Professional License.

Merrimack's M.Ed. program strives to equip professional candidates with the necessary tools and knowledge required in the complex environment of today's schools. Courses are conveniently scheduled to fit the lifestyles of practicing teachers and working adults. Most classes are scheduled in the late afternoon and evening.

For additional information on the program at Merrimack, call 978-837-4367 or visit www.merrimack.edu where you'll find information under Academics/Liberal Arts.

New Minor Provides Specialization in Special Needs

A new minor for the 2003-2004 academic year is the "Teacher of Students with Moderate Disabilities, PreK-8" program that prepares students to become specialized teachers who are knowledgeable on assessing, modifying and adapting classroom instruction for youngsters with special needs. Education students who graduate with this minor will have developed expertise in classroom management, be cognizant of available assistive technologies, and be able to network with community resources.

To meet the requirements of this specialization, additional courses that must be taken include "Assessment for Children with Special Needs" and "Curriculum Design and Adaptation for Children with Special Needs," among others. The program requires an additional practicum in a specialized setting, the program can be accomplished in the traditional four years with summer work.

Michael Quinn (left) and Frank McCall '81 are making career changes to become teachers.

Quinn, 41, a former national accounts manager for an international ocean transportation business, left that business four years ago to become a stay-at-home dad for his two children, who are now 9 and 7. When the youngest hit school age, Quinn considered his options. Like McCall, he

Strengthened Image Reflects Merrimack's Energy by Kathleen Franzese

Those are the first three lines of Merrimack's new admissions view-book, the centerpiece of recruitment materials for the college. These words convey the dynamic and contemporary environment of Merrimack today.

They are also the culmination of extensive research conducted last spring to fully explore how Merrimack constituencies perceive the college and to examine these perceptions in light of Merrimack's image, personality and current characteristics. When interviews with students, alumni, faculty and administrators on campus as well as high school guidance and admissions counselors and other college administrators were completed, what clearly stood out was the highly energetic and evolving nature of Merrimack.

Merrimack is perceived as a quality four-year liberal arts college with strong faculty and leadership that values teaching and extols the benefits of a liberal arts education while offering both solid and innovative applied learning and professional degree programs.

Research showed the need to further advance and communicate the good things happening at Merrimack, and to strengthen the college's image to reflect the energy and transformation that flourishes on this campus.

Over the summer, a compelling and integrated set of admission and enrollment management publications was developed to enhance student interest and increase applications and enrollment.

A new tagline - SET YOURSELF IN MOTION - has been adopted. The concept uses active images to present the true Merrimack as a school that's on the move, electric and future-thinking.

A print and broadcast advertising campaign this fall featured ads in Time, Newsweek, U.S. News & World Report and

Sports Illustrated and a television commercial on WCVB-TV-5 in Boston during September and October. In addition, a redesign of the college's Web site was launched in early September

New Warrior Logo Unveiled, "Mack" Debuts by Kathleen Franzese

The unveiling of a new logo/mascot for Merrimack College on November 14 heralded in Warrior Week, a week-long celebration of events featuring giveaways and appearances by the college's new warrior mascot. "Mack the Warrior" skated into the Lawler Arena carrying a huge flag bearing the college's new logo. Students in attendance received a free t-shirt and some were thrown to the crowd between periods.

The logo (shown here) depicts a figure of the Roman era inside the shape of a shield. The figure ties in with the era of St. Augustine, the 5th century bishop whose philosophy and teachings have guided Merrimack College since its founding in 1947. The shield shape mirrors the college historical seal.

"The new logo expresses strength and character, two attributes that all of our students, and indeed the entire Merrimack community, demonstrate in whatever challenges they face," said Merrimack College President Richard J. Santagati.

The announcement last month culminated years of discussion and debate among the Merrimack community which led to the recommendation by students this year to change the logo/mascot since it was offensive to some members of the community. The new logo replaces the figure of an Indian that had been Merrimack's athletic mascot for decades. The discussion about changing logos that depict Native Americans has also been a central issue of the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights, the National Congress of American Indians, the NAACP, the National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA) and other groups. Many colleges and universities have changed their logos as a result, including Dartmouth College and Stanford University.

Following the student recommendation, discussion continued and several alternatives were further explored, including also changing the Warrior name.

"Throughout this process there was a strong and overwhelming sentiment from many of our Merrimack community to retain the Warrior name. We explored many sides of this issue and in the end, it was the words of The Very Reverend Vincent A. McQuade, O.S.A., the college's first president, that demonstrated the original intent and true meaning of the name Warriors," explained President Santagati.

He referenced the message written by Fr. McQuade in 1948 for the student newspaper, The Warrior. Those words are:

"I trust that you, the students of Merrimack College, will be warriors in the literal sense! Men who are ever mindful of your obligations, devoted to duty, foremost in the vanguard of those combating evil and injustice - in short, loyal and trustworthy men, always keenly aware of your duties to God and neighbor."

(The reference to men only was due to the fact that Merrimack did not become co-educational until 1950.)

"It was clear that from the earliest days of our college it was the indomitable spirit of a noble individual - dedicated to overcoming obstacles and aspiring to achieve all that is possible - that was the true intent of adopting the name Warriors for Merrimack's athletic teams," said Santagati.

The decision to retain the Warrior name brought the need for a new logo/mascot.

Although a contest last spring did yield some good direction, the college worked with a graphic designer to develop four options which were then tested with small groups representative of college community members.

"I think this logo was definitely the right choice," said Bruno Zanotti, a sophomore and member of the men's basketball team. "This logo represents Merrimack and its athletics program well and should bring a renewed spirit to our campus. This is a step forward for us and it is going to be fun to be a part of this new look."

Merrimack Launches Center for Public Opinion Research

With the goal of providing timely and accurate information on issues of public importance, Merrimack College has established the Center for Public Opinion Research (CPOR) which will serve as a research center and offer students an opportunity to engage in the research process. Made possible with a grant from the Eagle-Tribune Publishing Companies, the CPOR's most ambitious initiative is the Bay State Poll, a statewide scientific survey of Massachusetts residents that will be conducted quarterly on a variety of political and social issues.

One of the first of its kind in the state, the Bay State Poll will track public opinion over time, helping to indicate trends. Such information may include approval ratings for state and national leaders, trial heat questions, opinions on the most important problems facing the state and nation, as well as opinions on the state of the economy. The center utilizes a variety of survey (telephone, in-person, mail, Web, E-mail, and self-administered) and non-survey methodologies to gather information on public opinion in the state, region and nation. Because it is an omnibus survey, the Bay State Poll offers a cost effective way for government agencies, non-profit organizations, and private businesses to share the costs of a survey project in order to obtain information critical to their endeavors.

The center is fully equipped with a 12-station, state-of-the-art Computer Assisted Telephone Interviewing (CATI) system that allows for customized, reliable and efficient data collection. In keeping with Merrimack's educational mission, the center will enhance the college's academic offerings by involving students in the interviewing and research process and integrating the center's work into course curriculum.

The Center for Public Opinion Research at Merrimack College is directed by Dr. Russell Mayer who holds a Ph.D. from the University of Michigan and is an associate professor in the Department of Political Science at Merrimack. His areas of teaching and research include campaigns and elections, polling and public opinion, and political methodology.

"The possibilities of public information that the Center for Opinion Research can provide are endless," said Dr. Mayer. "We have the technology and expertise to fill a need in Massachusetts that will serve to not only provide important research on public opinion, but also to promote civic engagement in our communities.

"Most important, our students will benefit from hands-on research experience and added familiarity with the political process."

The first Bay State Poll was conducted and released in November.

Diversity Education Center Embraces All

As part of the college's presidential initiative to achieve greater diversity at Merrimack, the Diversity Education Center opened this semester and serves as an educational and supportive environment for the campus community. Located on the second floor of the Sakowich Campus Center, the center's 750-square-foot space features a wealth of resources such as books, journals, magazines, and videos encompassing all aspects of diversity.

The goal of the center, which is staffed by students who serve as ambassadors, is to foster discussion and understanding of all issues of diversity. All members of the Merrimack community are welcome to visit the center to communicate across lines of class, culture, disability, ethnicity, gender, national origin, race, religion, and sexual orientation.

The center is ideal for many social and academic events that contribute to an inclusive environment. Programs may include political science classes that discuss the positions of presidential candidates on issues of diversity, lunches exploring the issue of affirmative action, receptions before events hosted by the Center for Jewish-Christian Relations, and gatherings to watch televised events such as the celebration of Martin Luther King's speech.

"Merrimack is committed to advancing diversity on our campus to enhance the educational experience of our students and to better mirror the world in which they will live and work," said President Richard J. Santagati. "The Diversity Education Center is one more way that the entire community can explore and experience the richness of diverse cultures, traditions, languages, opinions and perspectives."

Merrimack Awarded National Service Learning Grant

Merrimack College has been awarded a $295,000, three-year grant to support a Higher Education Learn and Serve Program funded by the Corporation for National and Community Service (CNS).

The grant, one of only two awarded to higher education in Massachusetts, supports the Lawrence Math and Science Partnership, a program that will strengthen the math and science skills of 180 Lawrence middle school students, grades 5 through 8, who are challenged both in the classroom and by the Massachusetts Comprehensive Assessment System (MCAS). Only 49 of 248 programs were approved by CNS this year, their most competitive year to date.

The college received word of the grant's awarding from the office of Massachusetts Senator Edward Kennedy, a staunch supporter of service learning and a major supporter of the Corporation for National and Community Service. CNS provides opportunities for Americans of all ages and backgrounds to serve their communities through three programs: Senior Corp, Americorps, and Learn and Service America. Learn and Service America provides grants to schools, colleges, and nonprofit groups to support efforts to engage students in community service linked to academic achievement and the development of civic skills.

Led by Merrimack through the Stevens Service Learning Center, the after-school program operates throughout the academic year, and includes a one-week summer campus experience. The five community partners that teamed up with Merrimack are:

Nearly sixty Merrimack students and faculty serve as learning mentors once a week for 25 weeks. Each week, the two-hour program includes assistance with homework and an hour devoted to a hands-on enrichment activity in physical and biological science and math.

The program is directed by Dr. Linda Foote, professor of biology, and supported by Mary McHugh, director of the Stevens Service Learning Center and professor of political science.

For Third Consecutive Year Merrimack Named a Top Ten College

For the third year in a row, U.S. News & World Report has named Merrimack College a top ten regional school in the magazine's America's Best Colleges. The rankings include Merrimack number seven as a Best Comprehensive College - Bachelor's - in the north. It is the seventh consecutive year that Merrimack has been named a top tier regional school. A comprehensive college, as defined by U.S. News & World Report, focuses on undergraduate education and offers a range of degree programs - in the liberal arts, which account for fewer than half of their bachelor's degrees, and in professional fields such as business, nursing and education.

The rankings are based in part on a formula that uses objective data in seven measures to capture academic quality. They are: assessment by administrators at peer institutions, retention and graduation rates, faculty resources, student selectivity, financial resources, and alumni giving.

"Merrimack's consistent placement as a top ten school in these rankings is a validation of the transformation that the college has experienced over the past decade. More and more students and their families are recognizing Merrimack's academic excellence and our commitment to providing them with a superior comprehensive learning experience. The substantial investment we have made in educational and residential college resources has enhanced the value of a Merrimack degree for students and alumni," said Merrimack President Richard J. Santagati.

Plaza Dedicated to Merrimack Benefactor by Marie DeMarco

In recognition of the more than $5 million in student scholarship support that the O'Brien Foundation has provided to Merrimack College and its students, the quad area in front of the college's Sakowich Campus Center was recently dedicated to the foundation's benefactor, the late James W. O'Brien, a prominent Lynn businessman who died in 1979.

Over the past 25 years, the O'Brien Foundation has pledged and contributed nearly $5 million in scholarship support to more than 1,000 Merrimack students and 242 participants of the O'Brien Revolving Loan Fund. In addition, since 1997, 15 students have been awarded the four-year, merit-based O'Brien Foundation Presidential and Presidential Gold Scholarships. In 2000, the O'Brien Foundation helped establish the Merrimack College - O'Brien Lynn Scholarships awarded yearly to two deserving scholars who are in the top 5% of their class at either St. Mary's of Lynn or Lynn English High School.

The foundation is the legacy of James W. O'Brien, an orphan at age 13.

The dedication of the James W. O'Brien Plaza included remarks from two student recipients of the O'Brien scholarships. Sean O'Grady '04, president of Merrimack's Student Government Association, said, "The generosity of the O'Brien Foundation has enabled many students, myself included, to focus on their educational endeavors. It is appropriate that we dedicate the plaza at the crossroads of our academic campus in the name of James W. O'Brien."

The trustees of the foundation, who attended the dedication, are (left to right) James McInnis, the foundation's administrator; Andrew Fila, principal of Lynn English High School; Carl DiMaiti, principal of St. Mary's Regional High School in Lynn, Mass.; Marybeth McInnis, Esq. and Richard J. ## Hundreds Gather to Dedicate Santagati Hall

More than 200 people gathered to dedicate Santagati Hall, the college's newest student residence, in honor of President Richard J. Santagati and his contributions to Merrimack.

Calling President Santagati a visionary and a leader, Chairman of the Board of Trustees Frank Marchilena said, "What really makes this dedication so touching is that a committee of students recommended to the trustees that we name the dorm after the president. That tells you something about how he relates to the students. President Santagati simply loves and respects students and their experience here at Merrimack. His vision has always been clear and about what is in the best interest of our students – excellence in academics enhanced by a dynamic student life experience.

Student Anna Sabella presented President Santagati with a plaque that will hang in Santagati Hall.

Student Thomas Cobb, who resides in Santagati Hall, spoke eloquently about the president and how his close interaction with students enhances their time on campus.

"I am proud to call Santagati Hall my dorm and my home," he said. "There are very few colleges where students get to spend time with and get to know the president of their college."

Humbled by the overwhelming turnout and extremely kind words at the event, President Santagati said that he is "forever connected to Merrimack College, to this community, a community that I love." He noted how truly touching it is to know that his father, a barber in Lawrence when the president was growing up, would have been extremely proud to see the Santagati family name on an edifice. "I am honored beyond all expectation."

A plaque, which hangs in Santagati Hall, was presented to President Santagati by student Anna Sabella. It reads, "In recognition of Richard J. Santagati, Merrimack College's fifth president, and his love for this college, its students, and his sincere commitment to and belief in the education, values, and opportunities to be found on this campus and the promise of each member of this community to make a difference in our world."

Former Faculty Member Remembered by Marie DeMarco

The English Department conference room was a place where Dr. Catherine Murphy would entertain and engage her colleagues with her wit, humor and wonderful stories of Ireland. In a ceremony held this fall, the college named Sullivan 207 for her. Kate, to those who knew and loved her, died in 2001. A generous gift from her estate to the English Department permitted the renovation and furnishing of the conference room.

Dr. Murphy was a member of the English faculty for 30 years, retiring from the college in 1995. She received her Ph.D. from Trinity College, Dublin and was appointed to the Merrimack College faculty in 1965. Over the span of her career, she rose to the rank of Professor; chaired the department; created an innovative internship program for English majors; regularly served as advisor to The Merrimack Review, the department's student literary magazine; and published essays on Irish short story writers in professional journals.

Dr. Murphy was instrumental in sponsoring events that brought Irish writers such as Seamus Heaney and Mary Lavin to campus. She also served throughout her career on a number of regular and special committees of the Faculty Senate, including the curriculum committee and rank and tenure committee, which she frequently chaired.

Dr. Geraldine Branca, professor of English, noted, "Kate's laughter was contagious; her skill at storytelling legendary; her knowledge dazzling. The dedication of the conference room in her name will help to keep alive, at the college she loved, her passions for literature and teaching."

Gracing one wall in the room is a set of five original photographs depicting scenes in Ireland which are a gift of Kevin W. Salemme '92, director of media instructional services at Merrimack since 1984. A friend and colleague of Kate Murphy, he shared with her a deep love of Ireland's spiritual landscape.

The Catherine A. Murphy Memorial Scholarship was established in her memory. Individuals wishing to contribute to this fund, can send their donation to Donor Relations at Merrimack College, 315 Turnpike Street, Box A-8, North Andover, MA 01845.

AUGUSTINIAN LEGACY

"In the Acts of the Apostles, 'There was,' it says, 'in the believers, one soul and one heart.' There were many souls, faith had made them one. So many thousands of souls were there; they loved each other, and many are one: they loved God in the fire of charity, and from being many they are come to the oneness of beauty."

– St. Augustine

On the Creed: A Sermon to Catechumens

By David Rattigan

As campuses and workplaces welcome increasingly diverse populations, the message that ethnic, gender and racial differences should be valued and embraced resonates in the current culture. Well-bred communities launch tolerance campaigns. Workplaces host workshops. The Supreme Court issues rulings to strike a balance between opportunity for all and a rigid quota system. In these areas and others, the diversity message is inescapable.

As those familiar with the writings of St. Augustine know, that sentiment was also promoted more than 1,600 years ago.

"The underlying value and principle upon which diversity is based is a profound respect for individual differences," says the Rev. James Wenzel, O.S.A., of Merrimack's Center for Augustinian Study and Legacy. It is a fundamental part of the philosophy of St. Augustine, dating back to his conversion to the spiritual life, in 386, when he made the decision to resign his position as a rhetorician and public orator for the Roman Emperor ó very prestigious positions ó and went to a friend's country villa to reflect on his life.

That period started him on a new path. Following his conversion and baptism in 387, he made the decision to adopt a contemplative, community-centered life in his home town, Tagaste, Africa. A few years later, called by the people of Hippo Regius to become their bishop, he chose to continue community life and be a bishop living among monks (an unprecedented arrangement).

"He had been searching for peace, for fulfillment, for happiness," Wenzel says. "What he didn't realize is that he really was looking for God." As a result of his reflective time, Augustine came to believe that God was present in each individual he encountered, rich or poor, educated or uneducated. "That's the fundamental basis for his respect for individuals, and his great appreciation of diversity," Wenzel says. "Anybody was welcome in his monastery. In Augustine's days, there were the very wealthy and the very poor. It didn't make a difference whether you were rich or poor; you were welcome. It was the great leveler. They were all to look upon each other as brothers, and respect each other. God doesn't look upon such human conditions as poverty and wealth.

"That principle can be read throughout The Rule of Saint Augustine," says Wenzel, referring to Augustine's guiding principles on the "purpose and basis of common life." The brothers are urged to live in harmony, call nothing their own, and rich and poor alike are to set aside their pride for the purpose of serving God and each other. "This is the real core for what we're talking about," Wenzel says. That philosophy of respecting individual differences extended beyond the boundaries of the monastery, and beyond contact with other Catholics. Augustine left behind a huge body of writing, and a legacy as a religious philosopher. His writings often counteracted those of other philosophers of the day whose views he found heretical, Wenzel said, but he did so, "always with tremendous respect."

Merrimack Mourns Loss of Great Lady

Joyce Daher-Belko

It is with tremendous sadness that the Merrimack community mourns the passing of Joyce Daher-Belko, a long-time friend and supporter of Merrimack College. At the time of her death, Joyce was co-president of the Friends of Merrimack College, a group of committed individuals who work to provide scholarship support to Merrimack students. She was the vice president and treasurer of Daher's Shoes Inc., a well known business in the Merrimack Valley.

In an interview with the Andover Townsman, Merrimack President Richard J. Santagati called Joyce "a talented businesswoman and role model for young men and women. She had a gentleness and sweetness about her, combined with business skills."

Always giving and supportive to Merrimack and its mission, Joyce this year decided to donate the proceeds of Daher's annual shoe sale to the Friends of Merrimack and presented a check for $3,365. This donation pushed the total amount raised by the Friends for student scholarships over the $100,000 mark.

Many organizations benefited from Joyce's support and assistance, including Lazarus House; the American Cancer Society; Creative Living, Inc.; the Quota Club; the Holy Family Hospital Ladies Auxiliary and many more. Joyce served on the Board of Directors of the Friends of Merrimack for four years.

"Joyce will always be remembered in our hearts as a tremendously caring, selfless and tireless woman who was the best of friends to Merrimack and its students," said Richard Reming, executive director of the Friends of Merrimack College.

Correction to the Alumnus/a of the Year Award

In our last issue, we mistakenly referred to the "Alumnus of the Year Award" as being the first award ever given at Merrimack. Actually, the award has been given out periodically for over 25 years. As we move forward, we plan to give the award out annually.

To our former recipients -- please accept our apologies for this error. We congratulate all of you for your devotion to Merrimack College.

Attention Merrimack College Cross Country Graduates!

Announcing a New Initiative Just for You

Did you ever consider the following question: How many student athletes continue to train and compete in their sport after leaving college? Unless they are good enough to become professional athletes, not very many...that is, unless they are runners!

Many Merrimack College cross-country graduates continue to run and compete in road races years after graduation.

If this describes you (or what you'd like to be), then the Merrimack Running Club may be a help by encouraging you, giving you training tips, helping you keep in contact with other cross-country alumni and by organizing running opportunities like the annual cross-country alumni race or participation in other road races throughout New England.

Watch for more information and a web site dedicated to you and your ongoing efforts. For more immediate information, please feel free to contact Warren Kay, associate professor, Religious Studies Department, at 978-837-4522.

Share Your Career Experiences

Alumni and parents are invited to share their experiences and ideas while providing support for our undergraduates who are preparing to enter the workforce. Career Networking Night 2004 will be held on Tuesday, March 30th, 2004.

You also serve your fellow alumni who are in career transition. We are in need of professionals from a variety of fields. Your involvement is critical to the success of this event. Please E-mail kathleen.marshall@merrimack.edu or call 978-837-5107 for more information.

Nominate a Committed Alumna/us

Nominate an Alumna/us who provides sustained service to Merrimack College. The Alumna/us of the Year Award recognizes loyal and active support of the work of the college. Nominations will be reviewed by an Awards Committee composed of alumni. Nominations are due before March 21, 2004. # Merrimack Dedicates Lawler Arena by Adam Busalacchi '05

The J. Thom Lawler Arena at Merrimack was dedicated on October 25 during a special ceremony in honor of its legendary coach and Hall of Fame member J. Thom Lawler. The dedication marked the culmination of a successful $1.2 million challenge led by three hockey alumni to name the college's hockey arena in tribute to their former hockey coach J. Thom Lawler who was head coach from 1965 until his death at age 44 in 1978.

The challenge was issued by Merrimack alumni John Donovan '78, Ron Connors '78, and Ken Duane '80, and reached success with support from many of their fellow alumni and Warrior hockey fans. Donovan and Connors were on the ice along with the Lawler family members prior to the game for a ceremonial puck drop. Between periods, they were joined on the ice by Merrimack President Richard J. Santagati and 21 members of the 1978 National Championship Team.

"All of the players here tonight and the fans are better off for having known him," said Donovan. "We all remember Thom as a shining example of family teamwork, unselfishness and commitment. Thom gave his time, energy and life to Merrimack hockey. He was a real champion to his family, players, staff and friends of Merrimack hockey and now his name will live on forever."

Lawler, a Merrimack Hall of Fame member, coached the Warriors for 13 seasons from 1965-1978, until his sudden death of a heart attack. Lawler compiled a 218-138-10 record at Merrimack; his .609 winning percentage remains the best in the history of Merrimack hockey. Lawler coached the Warriors to the program's Division II National Championship in 1978 and also guided them to three championships in the prestigious ECAC, while making 11 playoff appearances. Lawler also spent nine years as Athletic Director. Lawler's teams made the playoffs in all but one year while he was at the helm, and in addition to winning the ECAC titles, his team was runner-up four times.

Lawler died only months after leading the Warriors to their Division II National Title. Lawler's son, Tom, was a freshman on that team and went on to become Captain in the 1980-81 season.

With this dedication, Lawler's memory will be forever etched in the history of not only Merrimack hockey, but also the entire campus. A fundraising campaign is in progress that will transform the Lawler Arena into a 3,000-seat arena and add a new two-story lobby that will provide fans direct entrance from the parking lot. An upper concourse will serve spectators and feature a 3,000-square-foot VIP lounge, 8-10 private boxes, three press-media boxes, concessions and restrooms.

John Donovan '78 and Ron Connors '78 led the effort to dedicate Lawler Arena in their former coach's honor.

NEW COACHES JOIN MERRIMACK ATHLETICS

Jim Murphy served this year as head football coach, becoming the third coach in the history of the program. Murphy works at Enterprise Storage Solutions and serves as part-time head coach. Previously he was the offensive coordinator/quarterbacks coach at Bentley College. He received his B.S. in finance from Northeastern University. He was joined by Billy Tucker as the new full-time director of football operations. Tucker handles the day-to-day logistical aspects of the football program and is the liaison for financial aid, admission, and academics as well as a defensive positional coach and recruiting coordinator. Previously, he was assistant football coach at Bentley and taught special education in the Reading School System. He received his B.A. in behavioral science from Bentley.

The college welcomed Kathryn Lambert as head lacrosse coach. She is involved in recruiting, organizing the practices and training the team. Lambert is also a personal trainer at Lamberts Fitness Center in Dorchester and coaches at the Canton Sports Plex. She received a B.S. in business management from Stonehill College.

Ryan Polley '99 joined Merrimack this fall as head men's lacrosse coach. He manages the daily operations of the lacrosse program, including recruiting, practice planning, budgeting, and mentoring student-athletes. Previously he was head girls' lacrosse coach at Andover (Mass.) High School. Polley received a B.S. in accounting and finance from Merrimack in 1999.

Dear Alumni, Parents and Friends:

We are pleased to present the Honor Roll of Donors for the 2002-2003 fiscal year.

During the last year two exciting initiatives encouraged our alumni, parents and friends to give to the college in record numbers. The creation of the St. Augustine Society, in the Fall of 2002, provided opportunities for individuals who annually contribute five thousand dollars or more to Merrimack College to actively engage in the life of the college. These donors, who numbered 132 for fiscal year 2002-2003, experienced the direct impact of their gift on the college community and our students through close interaction with students and faculty.

Understanding the importance of donor participation, a group of leadership donors issued a challenge to all alumni during fiscal year 2002-2003. For every gift made by someone who had never donated or had not made a recent gift, this gift would be matched up to a maximum of $50,000. This incentive encouraged many donors and set overall participation rates at 31% for the year. The challenge to reach 40% participation by the 2004-2005 fiscal year continues and the opportunity remains to take advantage of this alumni challenge by making your gift during this year.

Merrimack is deeply grateful for the support of all individuals and organizations who give to the college. The following list recognizes the names of donors who provided support at the Charter Club level or above during the last year. We are thankful to all who chose to support Merrimack on an annual basis. This commitment sustains us and moves us closer to our vision of preeminence among Catholic colleges in the Northeast.
